Dom has extensive experience in the practice of sustainability in construction and endeavours to find innovative solutions to environmental issues faced in the building industry.

Since starting his career in the built environment, Dom has worked on major retail projects where he has applied his knowledge of sustainable environmental management to the challenges facing construction. Dom oversaw the environmental management for the highest ranked BREEAM retail building in the UK.

His practical experience with construction projects, gives Dom hands on experience in evaluating sustainable construction opportunities, including working with supply chains to deliver responsible procurement.

Dom is well placed to advise clients on environmental construction best practice; helping projects teams to reduce their environmental impact and promote sustainability in construction as well as comply with legislation and industry standards.

His background in construction has enabled him to develop an understanding of life cycle impacts and costs of developments. He is able to guide clients to choose options that will improve the environmental performance their projects.
